JJ's Paris List

Thank you for purchasing JJ's Paris List. Get ready to eat well in Paris!

ABOUT THE LIST

The recommendations come from my curated list of hundreds of restaurants, cafes, bistros, bakeries, dessert shops, wine bars and other places where I believe there's good food to be found in Paris. Food comes first. Atmosphere, service, decor and the overall experience matter, but what is on the plate is the main reason a place makes the list. Mediocre or ordinary food, or poor value for money, won't make it, no matter how famous or fashionable the place is.

I've been visiting Paris for almost 40 years and, since 2000, several times a year. The list has grown from my dining experiences and is kept current through research, openings and closures, menus and food photography, what I see walking past or stepping inside restaurants, sometimes including a good look at what's arriving on people's plates, and the observations of Paris food writers and knowledgeable diners whose judgment I trust. I haven't eaten at every place, but each has been selected because I believe it is somewhere you can eat well.

USING YOUR LIST

Your 25 recommendations reflect what you told us, with some flexibility and judgment about what you may enjoy during a one- to two-week trip.

Reserve popular restaurants early. The most sought-after places can book weeks ahead. Some restaurants do not take reservations. Others accept them only by telephone. If you have to call, you may need to try more than once. This is normal. Many restaurants know enough English to take a reservation, and hotel staff or a concierge can often help.

Tell the restaurant about allergies, dietary restrictions, preferences or other special requests as early as possible.

MAP, LINKS & NOTES

The At a Glance page puts all 25 recommendations on one Paris map. Restaurant numbers match the numbers used throughout the guide. Click a numbered restaurant name to open its Google Maps location, or scan the Google Maps QR code on an individual recommendation - especially useful with a printed copy.

Under each restaurant you can check Reserved, enter the date and time, and add your own notes. Save the PDF and your entries should remain when you reopen it. If plans change, use the map to see which recommendations are nearby.

GOOD TO KNOW

Recommendations are subjective. You may love some places more than others, and even an excellent restaurant can have an off night. JJ's Paris List has no commercial relationship with any establishments suggested. It does not control or guarantee their food, service or experience. Recommendations are provided for informational purposes only.

Always double-check opening days and hours before making a special trip. Restaurants can change schedules or close unexpectedly. This is especially important in August and around Christmas/New Year, when temporary closures are common and difficult to track reliably. A recommended restaurant may therefore be closed during part or all of your visit. Check its website or Google listing and, when in doubt, call. Fortunately, Paris is a very big food city so there is usually a good alternative open.
